

Goals for TTG:Schools

This year, with Teens Turning Green: Schools we hope to get as many schools as possible to pledge to a project as a part of Project Green Pledge. This project can be as simple as changing the soap in the school, or as ambitious as greening the entire food service. The campaign has all the necessary tools to make it easy for new members to do a project: an online toolkit with detailed steps of how to get involved, a database where schools all over the country can upload their case studies on products used in their schools, and many ideas and people to support them who are already involved in Teens Turning Green: Schools. We would also like to create a mentor program, setting up each new school that joins the campaign with one experienced mentor. At the national summit in February, the breakout groups will focus on how we can launch Project Green Pledge into a widespread national campaign. We are so excited to get new schools involved and to start effecting change on the national level about the toxic chemicals in our schools! -Cora Went, Co-President, TTG:Schools Campaign
